California Cattlemen's Association Welcomes New Office Administrator

Sacramento, Calif. – The California Cattlemen's Association (CCA) is pleased to announce the hiring of Jenna Chandler as office administrator. As the newest member of the California Cattlemen's Association staff, Chandler will communicate with members and assist other CCA staff in their ongoing efforts to promote and protect California's beef producers.

Growing up on a horse ranch in Lincoln, CA, Chandler developed a love for watching things grow, from alfalfa to livestock. Following her love of agriculture, Chandler attended the University of California, Davis (UC Davis) and majored in animal science and minored in English. While at UC Davis, she worked at the UC Davis Dairy in milk quality and herd management. She also spent time working at the UC Davis Hopkins Avian Facility, specializing in layers and broilers.

In 2012, she began work for the California State Assembly, serving both the 33rd and 6th Assembly Districts in various capacities and now joins the CCA staff with that legislative background.

"I'm excited to be a part of the CCA team," Chandler said. "I look forward to pairing my passion and background in agriculture and my experience working with members of the legislature with my role as CCA Office Administrator."

Chandler's responsibilities include initial telephone and personal contact with CCA members and the public while maintaining an orderly workflow in the office. She will also assist with meeting planning, preparation and scheduling.
